

New health coordinator for county named

By AARON ALDRIDGE
Staff Writer

Jessica Rosman has been named the new Sullivan County Public Health Network Coordinator, a position funded through the New Hampshire Department of Health and Human Services.

Rosman will be responsible for promoting and supporting continued development of a public health infrastructure and implement public health activities within the region.

"I'm really excited to get going and get people motivated," Rosman said.

As the new PHNC, Rosman will act as liaison with the state department of Health and Human Services, the statewide coalition of public health networks and other agencies involved with public health and prevention.

"Right now the county's focus is on community preparedness," Rosman said.

As part of those efforts, Rosman will develop and update the area's public health emergency response plan, initiate development of a medical reserve corps and implement a public education plan.

"We plan to expand into many other areas," Rosman said.

Rosman holds a master's degree in public health and is certified in FEMA disaster preparedness training.

Aaron Aldridge can be reached at (800) 545-0347 ext. 139, or by e-mail at aaldridge@eagletimes.com.